

Navigating Cultures™

Navigating Cultures™ is a workshop that provides a foundation for intercultural competence, appropriate for business professionals seeking to develop the core skills necessary for succeeding in culturally diverse settings. The program explores how culture affects business and workplace relationships and provides tools that allow participants to leverage the myriad of differences in the workplace. Special attention is given to understanding one's own cultural programming first, followed by identifying the ways that cultural differences between oneself and others will impact communication, collaborations, team dynamics and business practices.

Duration: 4-8 hours

Target Audience:

Teams, Leaders, New-Hires, and any other group that would benefit from a broader perspective and increased competence in working with cultural diversity in the workplace.

Objectives:

- Practice using tools and frameworks that increase cross-cultural competency and improve overall group performance.
- Identify trends in the behaviors and attitudes of one's self as well as the various cultures and sub-cultures that surround us.
- Examine the forces which create, influence, and reinforce the myriad of cultural styles found in the modern global workplace.
- Define and then explore numerous dimensions of culture and their impact on team dynamics.
- Plan for ongoing personal and professional development in the cross-cultural sphere.
- Learn to leverage the diversity of thought, approach, and style inherent in multicultural groups.

It's a multi-cultural world...
